HOLIDAY BOOKS.

WHERE TO BUY THEM.

BOOKS OF ALL KINDS AND PRICES-HOLIDAY ROOKS AND STANDARDS-BIOGRAPHY, HISTORY, FICTION,

FAIRY TALES, TRAVELS, ETC., ETC. It is the tritest of all trite things to say that no esent is more universally acceptable than a book. There are all manner of things that are welcome at various stages of life, but something that may be received with pleasure at one period of existence becomes a subject of indifference at another. Books are always in order, whether the recipient be a child or a grand-parent. This season has been especially productive in books distinguished not only by their beauty, but their merit, and the summary given below is a complete guide-book for those who intend making a purchase among them. With these directions before them they cannot well go astray.

HARPER & BROTHERS. The holiday list of this leading publishing bouse comprises many admirable books for the old as well as the young, not to forget some rich additions to the stock of fairy lore such as the children crave at Christinas time. Many of them are embellished with excellent engravings, and in every detail of mechanical execution fully maintain the reputation of the house First among the books of permanent value is "Drake's New-England Coast," which is crammed with anecdote and gossip, and filustrated with more than 300 engravings. This is not the first holiday eason this book has had. It was on the counters a year ago, and its great popularity then is the excuss for a new edition and a second invitation to a place it the Christmas box. In biography the house offers the interesting story of the "Life of the Rev. Dr. John the most part written by himself. Then there are three volumes of John Forster's "Life of Dean Swift," with a portrait by Rajou. Mr. Forster to vindicate the memory of the author of Gui liver from some of the aspersions that have been cast apon it, and finds even three volumes brief enough space to tell his story. Emilio Castelar, who has distinguishe bimself so greatly in almost every line of endcavor that one does not know whether to call him crater, statesman, author, or patriot, presents the "Life of Lord Byron, ecompanied by sketches of Victor Hugo, Alexander Dumas, Emile Girardin, and Adolphe Thiers. The work is translated by Mrs. Arthur Small. A useful and attractive vors, bandsomely illustrated, is the "Life and Habits of Wild Animals," the designs by Joseph Wolf and the letter press by Daniel Girand, F. L. S., F. Z. S. Eastern travel is represented by the Rev. J. P. Newman's " Babylon and veh," the narrative of a thousand miles on horse back, from the Persian Gulf to the Mediterranean, and Rev. Henry J. Van Lennep's Lands." Both are finely illustrated. Mrs. Virginia W. Johnson's "Catskill Fairies" leads the of the juveniles. The author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," whom the world will persist in nbering as Miss Mulock, appears with a number of "The Little Lame Prince," brought out again for the fittle people, "Books for Girls," and the "Adventures wnie." Edouard Laboulaye's "Fairy Tales of a Nations," and E. H. Knatchbull-Hugessen's " Pussy-Ca Mew" are also in the list. For more practical juvenile there is the whole long row of Abbott's story-books an aistories, a library in themselves.

D. APPLETON & CO.

The holidays announce themselves at the Appletons'. The buyers who throng the stores at Nos. 549 and 551 Broadway make dates unnecessary-ther could be no doubt about the season of the year. beuse does some of the finest printing and bieding in the United States, and although its enormous list of publica dons is mainly composed of standard works or works which are sure to be soon recognized as standards, I also, for this very reason, offers holiday buyers many greatest temptations of the season the handsomest of them is Eighteenth Century," by Paul Lacroix, who treats of its astitutions, customs, and costumes. The chromo-little and engravings are after the best Freuch arists. Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" is pro fusely illustrated by Alfred Fredericks, who has caught the iful spirit of the text, and put it into visible form with the aid of the best engravers on wood. It is printed tinted paper, and bound in cloth and merocco. Joseph Gastwick has followed his "German Poets" with Tweive Essays on the English Poets," the latter containing an equal number of photographic portraits. In foreign travel there are Franz Keller's sketches and criptions of "The Amazon and Madeira Rivers," and Aimé Humbert's "Japan and the Japanese." Both ar dinstrated by the authors themselves. Mr. Humbert was formerly Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Pienipo tentiary to the Swiss Confederation. His work has been translated by Mrs. Cashel Hoey, and edited by H. Bates of the Royal Geographical Society. Francis Wey's work an Rome has been isseed in a cheaper form, but it is still presentation books. Appletons' Journal for 1875 have been handsomely bound in cloth, and presents an inte esting variety of matter. The American Cyclopædia, it goes without saying, will find favor with the many who sire to make a costly gift of lasting benefit.

SCRIBNER, ARMSTRONG & CO. In taking its place near what is likely to be a new center for the book trade, this well-known house seems to have shown its wisdom in going part of the way meet its customers. The salesrooms are crowded with buyers, drawn in by the great display of handsom presentation books, with both fresh and familiar titles The finest of them all is undoubtedly Rousselet's "India and its Native Princes." This is a superb volume, de-Prince of Wales carried many copies with his to India to present to the princes and chiefs. two have merely drifted together, is Gustave Dere's por traiture of Spain, with descriptive letter-press and hi quario volume of nearly 800 pages, printed on toned paper and bound in cloth. Both "Spain" and "India" besutiful specimens of the book-maker's art. Feul Morcoy's "Travels scross South America," from the Atlantic to the Pacific, is profusely illustrated. For travels of a less authentic character, Jules Verne's Mysterious Island" may be consulted. Dore's pencil appears again in "The Myths of the Rhine," by M. Baintine, the author of "Picciola." Appropriate cifts Fronde, Mommsen, and Cartius, and the writings of Max Works of "Ik Marvel," and illustrated editions of Dr. Holland's " Bitter Sweet " and " Kathrina." The " Brie s-Brac" series completes its first part with the tenth volume, and has been bound in elegant hall-vellum for the holidays. Henri Van Lana's translation of Molifer's works is ready. The juveniles are led this year, as they have been a number of years before, by Mrs. Dodge's "Haus Brinkner," who is fairly established in the affec-tions of the young of all ages. He comes back this year in a handsome new dress, and with number of pictures gathered in Holland, where Hass made a great figure on his "Silver Skates." A new edition of Mrs. Dodge's "Rhymes and Jingles" has also been issued. Frank R. Stockton has written a companion volume to his "Roundabout Rambles," entitled, "Tales Out of School," St. Nicholas for 1875 has been bound in one volume, and makes a hand some encyclopædia of juvenile literature. One of the first things to strike the eye of the visitor in the store is William Page's recently completed bust of Shakespeare, of which a copy is exhibited in the reception room, and for which orders are taken in the store.

JAMES R. OSGOOD & CO.

This Boston firm meets the holiday trade with several new books and many long established and unvarying favorites. Their list is led by John G. Whit with great care for this season's trade. The poem is illustrated with numerous designs by Miss M. A. Hallock and Mr. Thomas Moran, and engraved by A. V. S. Anthony. The volume has a highly ornamented cover and is in fine "Little Classics" are also made a specialty for the boildays, and are unanimously voted the very thing for gifts. One of them is pretty, a half dozen of the dainty little books make a charming present, and the whole sixtoen—a baker's dozen of prose selections, three of poetry, and one of "authors," make a little library by them-selves. The newer and still smaller "Vest Pocket Series"-Whittler's "Snow-Bound." Longfellow's "Evangeline," and two triads of Emerson's best essays—suit small peckets in a double sense, and are also a "happy thought" in the way of gift for those who wish to suggest boundy thoughts of the giver without presuming to offer presents of value. "A Farmer's Vacation," by George E. Waring, jr., of Ogden Farm, which describes and illustrates the life and methods of farmers in the great agricultural countries of the world, will fill a large pace at the quiet Winter fireside. Books descriptive of art and art producers were seemingly never more popuaddition to Osgood & Co.'s list is Mrs. J. H. Shedd's book on "Pamous Painters and Paintings," which is embellished with heliotypes of the more celebrated paintings The admirers of the American poets have a holiday offering in the "Poetic Localities of Cambridge," views and places of Cambridge which have been made famous by the poetic galaxy of the present century. Mr. Stedman's "Victorian Poets" are in plain cloth covers, suitable for all the year. Oegood & Co.'s list of old and new editions of the poets is large and well known to the public. Among recent novels there is Henry James, jr.'s "Roderick Hudson," and of standard works, a new popular edition of Hawthorne's Works, uniform with "The Little Classics;" the illustrated Melrose "Waverley," of thirteen volumes, uni-form with The "Kensigton" Thackeray; the illustrated "Gadshill," Dickens; the illustrated "Library" Reade; and "Library" Thackerny, completed, and in which the latter's five volumes of miscellanies are added to his novels. Osgood & Co. are represented in this city

HENRY HOLT & CO.

This firm maintains the enviable reputation it has so long enjoyed for publishing choice and standard books, which elevate the taste of the community rathe than cater to it. Mr. Holt still retains his position as the publisher of Henri Taine's works, which he fairly earned by being the first in this country to bring his books before a constituency so new to him. One of the most recent of Holt & Co.'s publications was a handsome edition of Taine's works, complete in 12 volumes. The Leisure Hour Series, begun long ago, which has embraced so many popular and meritorious works of fiction, has lately been reënforced by "Pretty Miss Bellew." Buyers of holiday gifts will be sure of finding at this store, No. 25 Bond-st., many of the best books of recent times. Mr. Helt has made himself known, for instance, as the publisher of the works of John Stuart Mill, and of many others of high characte and great value. And this distinction helds good not only in respect to books having a scientific and practical value, but to works of fiction and verse.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS. This firm has brought out one of the most unique holiday catalogues ever published in this coun A work of great interest to New-Yorkers is the autiful series of etchings by Eliza Greatorex, with descriptive text by M. Despard, and entitled "Old New-York, from the Battery to Blocmingdale," Etchings in Colorado" are by the same hand, introduced by a chapter from Grace Greenwood. In the same cate gory of elegant presentation books are the illustrations of American scenery in the "Gallery of Landscape Paintings," with letter-press descriptions. The vol ume is a quarto, and contains 24 engravings on steel. The new Mount Vernon edition of Irving's "Life of Washington" is in two volumes, fully illustrated with 27 steel plates, printed upon tinted paper with wide margin, and bound in a new style of cloth. This work has bee ssued with direct view to the increasing interest in the Centenuial, and is probably the most elegant edition of this standard work yet published. Those who believe that a holiday gift should yet be practical may be attracted by the new "Library Atlas of Modern Historical and Classical Geography," which is by well-known authors. A charming account of the home of the fairy tales for juveniles is Mrs. Jane G. Austin's "Moonfolk," which was very popular last season. The 65 design y W.J. Linten are grotesque and ghostly, but the ghostly spirit is as benign and peaceable as the man in the me numself. "The Girlhood of Shakespeare's Heroines" is a series of tales by Mary Cowden Clarke which has delighted three generations. Bryant's "Among the Trees," suitably illustrated, is also on the list in which the poets have a good representation. There are several notable importations, including "The Album of the Passion Play at Oberammergau" and "Selected Pictures from the Galleries and Private Collections of Great Britain." Futcam & Sons will be found on the corner of Fourth-ave. and Twenty-third-st.

G. W. CARLETON & CO. This enterprising firm is to be found in Madison-square, where the business and social life of the city is supposed to be centered. Their publications are almost within the borders of fiction, and offer a great variety of romances and novels by standard and recent onthors. They are in a position to meet the largely prevaliling taste, always marked at Christmas time, for light and entertaining reading. Among their latest additions to the shelves are "Intelice," by Angusta Evans Wilson; Josephine among the West India Islands, by W. P. Taiboys; "The Miller of Silcott-Mill," a new book by Mrs. Deslonde of Louisiana; "Courting and Farming," by Mrs. Julie P. Smith: "Norine's Revenge," by May Agues Fleming; "Chorette," a tale of New-York ife; "Johnny Sudlow," an English reprint, and the Kingsbury sketches." There are many stories for the inveniles, such as "Marguerite's Journal," Mrs. Emer-son's "Little Folks' Letters," and holiday editions of Capt. Mayne Reid's exciting stories, which have never failed in stirring up the imagination and interest of the nost phloginatic of boys. They offer besides new editions of "Rebinson Crusee," "Swiss Family Robinson," and The Arabian Nights." Then come the works of the American humorists, and last, though by means least in interest at this season, the "Mother Goose Melodies "

HURD & HOUGHTON.

This firm, which has its place of business at No. 13 Astor-place, now has ready "The Familiar Letters of John Adams and His Wife Abigail Adams," during the Revolution, with a memoir of the latter by Charles Francis Adams: "The German Element in the War of American Independence," by Gen. Washington Greene, which contains the stories of Steuben and DeKalb, and makes some disclosures concerning the German mercena ries; "A Glimpse at the Art of Japan," by James Jackson Jarves, and a strong gleam of "Winter Sunshine," by John Burroughs, the author of "Wake Robin." Some of their recent publications have strong claims on holiday buyers. There is that bright book for children, the "Do ngs of the Badley Family in Town and Country;" and A. P. Russell's literary mosaic called "Library Notes," and Prof. Nathaniel Holmes's contribution to the controversy over "The Authorship of Shakespeare." Hurd & Houghton have all the works of Hans Christian Anderson, the minitable, in various forms, and offer standard editions of Cooper, Dickens, Macaulay, Lord Bacon, Carlyle and Michael De Montaigne. They have also for sale a great variety of valuable and beautiful books on the fine arts, by the best foreign and American critics and artists.

MACMILLAN & CO. This firm's list of new books and new editions for the holidays was and is still large, but it has been somewhat curtailed by an unfortunate delay in getting some of their most prominent publications from the press. Nevertheless the available list is large and offers a great variety. It includes " Jowett's Dialogues of Plato," a new translation, and, to take a long jump, the Marquis of Lorne's "Guido and Lita," the latest contribution of noblity to literature. The life of "Anionio Allegri Da Correggio from the German of Dr. Julius Meyer" will attract the attention of art students. Macmillan's "Sabbath of the Fields," and Matthew Arnold's new discussion of "God and the Bible," are followed by a merry lot of juveniles, led by "Ridicula Redtviva," a series of nursery rhymes. Among them is to be found the child's leading question, "Tell me a Story," which answers itself, and is a book uniform with the well-known "Lady Barker's Stories." A more substantial book is "The Children's Treasury of English Song," edited by Palgrave.

LIPPINCOTT & CO.

This leading Philadelphia publishing house, which is found at Nos. 715 and 717 Market-st., in that city, feel the public pulse with great eleverness. They have prescribed new holiday editions of Washington Irving's most attractive stories, such as "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow and the Spectral Bridegroom," and "Rip Van Winkle," who overslept himself in the Catskills. Rip's character is fully portrayed by the clever pencil of the artist, Darley. The last of the Irving set is "The Sketch-Book of Geoffery Crayon, Gent.," which is a very attractive volume. C. C. Bombaugh has gleaned "The Literature of Kissing" from poetry, history, and fiction, though the latter task would seem endless. "Huzbiti's Life of Napoleon Bonaparte" is presented in a new dress, and a marked volume on "Cotemporary Art" contains etchings and original pictures by well-known artists of the present day.

W. F. GILL & Co. This Boston house has prepared a literary feast that will be inaugurated at Christmas, but will continue with all freshness through the Winter. Foremost smong their books is "Laurel Leaves," a presentation collection of the best of poems, stories, and essays, by leading American writers, and containing also several pieces never before published. Walter Thornbury has made a collection of "Legendary and Historical Ballads," which are profusely illustrated. "The Hern of Plenty" is a collection of home poems and pictures by such graceful writers as Miss Aicott and Miss Muloch, Golden Treasures of Poetry, Remance, and Art" must much spice into the waning year by her " Sermons to the Clergy." The Dickeus-Collins Christmas stories are issued in permanent form. These publishers also have Douglas; also, a complete edition of Tennyson's poems. including "Queen Mary."

SHELDON & Co.

Great attractions in standard English books are offered by Sheldon & Co., at No. 677 Broadway. Their counters are well supplied with juvenile books Every grown-up purchaser can recommend, from per-sonal acquaintance and bright remembrance, the various series of "Rollo Books." Many a foreign tourist has been able to trace the conception of the voyage across the sea to "Rello's Tour in Europe." Not less interesting are "Abbott's American Histories," "Arthur's House Stories," "Walter's Tour in the East," and "Pictures and Stories of Animals." Sheldon & Co.'s most elegant gift book is the second series of "Our Poetical Favorites," by Prof. A. C. Kendrick. It is a volume of selections from English poets. "Leah, a Woman of Pashion," and Spurgeon's "Lessons to My Students," are two representative books on their list.

LEE & SHEPARD.

The juveniles rely on these Boston publishers in great part for their Winter supply of tempting and exciting stories. First of all on the list of Lee & Shepard there is Thomas Wentworth Higginson's "Young Folks" History of the United States;" Elijah Kellogg's Centennial story, " Brought to the Front," and the Oliver Optic series, including the latest, "Going West." " The Asbury Twins," by Sophie May, is one of the brightest and most wholesome books for the children offered this season. Works for bigger people are "Ballads of Home," edited by George M. Baker, and "Nearer My God to Thee," a poetical prayer by Sarah F. Adams.

CLAXTON, REMSEN & HAFFELFINGER.

This Philadelphia firm, who are represented in this city by James Miller at 647 Broadway, have jus published "O'er Moor and Fen," a novel by Charlotte Walsingham, the "Swedenborg Library," Shakespeare and the Bible," and a volume which pokes good-humored fun at the Centennial, entitled "One Hundred Years a Republie : Our Show," an account of the International Exposition, by those anonymous individuals, Daisy Cutshort and Arry O'Pagus. The volume is illustrated by A. B.

THE COMMON SCHOOLS.

SPEECH AT DES MOINES.

Prom The Catholic World for January.

Taking all things into consideration, the speech is fully equal to any written production of the President. It is direct. It is plain. It is manly and vigorous, and far superior to any other oration which we have heard of from the same distinguished quarter. Beyond all things it expresses, better than many imagine, the common sentiments of the American people. We have not been surprised at the general applianse with which it has been greeted; and we think that all our readers will agree in the judgments which we are about to express with regard to it.

Trying as hard as we can to lash ourselve. or funds to defray funeral expenses. They can be sent to Cot. J. W. Marshall, No. 265 Broadway. This is really a deserving case, and I respectfully ask your aid.

Frank M. Clark.

Trying as hard as we can to hash ourselves into fury; trying to hancy ourselves insulted, by representing to ourselves that the head of this nation has gone out of his way and abased his dignity, in order to east an aspersion at a large and respectable class of the community, we are forced to give it up, and to lay down our pen; for we find nothing in the oration with which we are in the least disposed to take issue. On the contrary, we are prepared to join our tribute to the burst of applianse which echoes through the land. We are convinced that, if it meets with the attention which it merits, the country at large, and Catholies in particular, will treasure the "Des Moises speech" among the "Sayings of the Pathers." Like Washington's Farewell, and Webster's mighty peroration, and Lincoln's noble and pathetic Inaugural, it will pass from the vulgar atmosphere of party strife into the pure and screne empyrean of immortality.

"Expange free schools," the President says, "and resolve that not one dollar appropriated for their support shall be appropriated for the support shall be appropriated for the support of any scelarian schools."

Do we hear aright! Does the President of the United States gardent of the pareaught in second and the proposition which has brought us so sive for a moderate purse. They give their attention to standard religious and juvenile literature, and their list includes such works as Miss West's "Romance of Missions," Andrew Thomson "In the Holy Land," Kip's "Historical Scenes from the old Jesuit Missions," "Theodoria, a Home Story," by Placke F. McKeen; "The Harrington Girls," by Sophy Winthrop; and R. L. Dabney's "Sensualistic Philosophy."

ROBERT CARTER & BROTHERS.

These publishers always keep a large assortment of juvenile books on hand at their store, 530 Broadway, and have a very good she wing of new books for the holiday season, such as "Forty Years in the furkish Empire," by Dr. Prime; "The Autohography of Dr. Guthrie;" the Rev. Alex. Dickson's "All About Jesus;" a neat and pretty selfilon of "High Miller's Works," and some delightful books for the little ones, including "The Say and Do Series," and "Miss Ashton's Girls."

E. P. DUTTON & CO.

This firm may be found at 713 Broadway, and are the agents of J. R. Osgood & Co., Boston. They publish many books themselves. Among their recent issues is an essay by Henry C. Pedder, on Religion and Progress.

This well-known Boston firm includes among its Christmas announcements a full set of the stories of the Rev. Edward E. Hale, one of the best of the short they will be found at The Best of the short they will be first the best of the short they will be deviced a shall render them equally desirable min" schools, or that such arrangement as a ball render them equally desirable min" schools, and a shall render them equally desirable min" schools, and a shall render them equally desirable min" schools, and a shall render them equally desirable min of these sectarian schools, and the first appropriated for the support of any sectarity and the proposition which at population and the project had be appropriated for the support of all the least arrangements and schools.

We ask for nothing whether them equally desirable for catholes and the children price of the children brought up catholes. It can be done in various ways. The State can pay the salaries of the various ways. The State can pay the salaries of the various ways. The State can pay the salaries that the money will be knonestly aid out, and the children receive their due amount of secular instruction. Again, the State may pay a pro-rata, and allow teachers to compete for scholars. This is done in Protestant England and Prussia, as well as in Catholie France and Austria, and is, obviously, most in harmony will democratic principles. Other ways may be devised which will securely justice to all parties. There's note districts. These are always securicallidren, without the State. The State and ways serving the common school into charitable institutions, and let parenns provide. But thus, we are persuaded, is full of practical difficulties.

But the plan actualty adopted has been to tax all allice for the common school and pet maintain a system which perfectly suits Protestants, but to which Catholies cannot honesity or conscientiously agree.

The Procedent further says: "Resolve that neither State has supported, and does support, "institutions of learning mixed "with sectarian, pagan, or affect to the subject of those who have completely broad and permitted to the spirit of those who have completely broad and perm

A man has been elected to the highest office in the gift of a free people, the limits of which have been fixed by a custom handed down by the fathers of the nation, and which, to the minds of true patriots, has the force of law. When such a trust does not satisfy the honored recipient, and be, yielding to personal motives, strains every nerve and seeks by every means at his command to brack down all burriers to continuation of power, thereby abusing the dignity of his post and the confidence of the people—that is ambition.
